Check out what's happening...

Friday marks the end of the 3rd quarter. The students have been busy working on their reading fluency. They have worked hard to try to write a four smiley face sentence consistently. In math students worked on practicing strategies to solve addition and subtraction problems. I am very proud at how much each of them have grown so far this year! I can't believe there is only one quarter left of kindergarten.

Reading: This week we will be reading The Little Red Hen Bakes a Pizza and The Three Pigs. Students will use these stories to practice sequencing and identifying the setting.

Math: We will begin our unit on measurement this week. Students will be comparing a variety of objects and identifying which item is longer or shorter. We will also use pan balances to measure items and compare their weight

Phonics/Sight words: This week we will continue to review the vowels and identify which vowel we hear in the middle of the word.

Science: In science we will be working on our five senses. Students will complete a variety of activities that will require them to use at least one of their senses.
